Tribal Spotlight

Driving on Downstream Boulevard towards the casino, guests are welcomed by the Quapaw Tribal Flag. The tribal flag was developed in the late 1970's by the past Tribal Business Manager Lloyd Buffalo, Secretary-Bookkeeper Barbara Kyser-Collier and tribal member Walter King, Jr. The first copy was drawn out on cardboard by Kyser-Collier then later the picture was transferred to canvas flags which were hand painted, by local artist John Fitzgibbon.

Just like Downstream Casino, the tribal flag depicts generations of Quapaw history. The red and blue background of the flag reflect the colors that are in a French trade broad cloth; a wool fabric that was used for blankets and clothing, which were worn by Chiefs and worn in the Native American Church. The eagle feathers pay respect to the eagle, the sacred bird that flies the highest and can communicate with ah-Kah-Da; there are four representing the four directions. Eagle feathers were also used within the Native American Church meetings and many other tribal ceremonies. The buffalo supports the survival of the Quapaw people, who used the skins for food, clothing and shelter, with the remaining portion for tools, weapons and armor.

Winter Warm-Up Bourbon Bubbler Body Treatment

February Special

A decadent body scrub that will make your inhibitions melt away as brown sugar and real Kentucky whiskey combine in this rich, pecan scented shea butter body scrub. When massaged in, its creamy, finely granulated texture gently exfoliates dead skin cells, leaving your body ultra-soft while unleashing an enveloping bourbon-syrup aroma.

You'll feel total relaxation & rejuvenation after the full-body application of a hydrating honey glaze and shea butter body cream. Soft, flowing massage strokes release tension; leaving you in a blissful-bourbon dream like state.
