Tribal Spotlight

The Quapaw Nation once inhabited a vast portion of Arkansas. Once they started their journey towards northeastern Oklahoma, Tribal members traveled on foot through the timber covered hills and forests of Arkansas. These forests were filled with a variety of trees including the strong, firm red oak.

Red oaks were an important part of Quapaw history. These trees were used to make our homes as the wood was very strong and sturdy. Just like the red oak, we as a Quapaw people view ourselves to be strong, sustaining the longevity of the tribe. In honor of the trees, the name Red Oak was given to the fine dining establishment here at Downstream.
